Description

Originally single-storey, subsequently sub-divided into three-storeys. Three-bay, mid-terrace building, set at the back edge of the pavement with generally dressed rusticated sandstone façade and natural slate pitched roof. Stone cornice, dentil course, frieze and architrave at eaves; chamfered quoins from architrave to lower cornice located at spring line of arched openings; diamond faced quoins from cornice to plinth. Three full-height semi-circular-headed arched openings in the after Gibbs surround at head only, and recessed inner arches. Original sills removed and structural openings extended to ground floor level to form three door openings. (See photo circa 1973). Contemporary casement windows.

'1825: this building was erected as a public library and reading room and is now occupied by the offices of Frazer, Mitchell and Co. and S. and W.J. Donnell. It is faced with cut Dungiven sandstone, now regrettably painted. Architecturally the building is interesting, with a fine entrance with fanlight, somewhat spoiled by the collection of nameplates. The designer tried to express the interior function externally, hence the interesting play with the fenestration. Inside, the former library, now an auctioneer's room is the full height of the building with a laylight, and three tall round headed windows. On the wall is a clock, and opposite is a wind-gauge operated by gearing to a wind vane formerly on the roof, perhaps indicative of the reading habits of the local sea captains!'

History

'The Public Library and News-Room, situated at the junction of Ship-quay Street and Castle Street, ..., was erected in 1825, at an expense of £1800, late Irish currency, raised by private subscription, excepting two sums of £100 each, contributed by the corporation, as appears from their accounts. Its length is 42 feet, its breadth 23, and its height 35. It contains the committee-room of the Chamber of Commerce. In 1826 a memorial was presented to the deputation of the Irish Society by a committee of the Londonderry Library Association, soliciting aid towards liquidating a debt of £186, in consequence of which a donation of £20 was recommended by the deputation.'

A TELEPHONE EXCHANGE FOR DERRY AND DISTRICT.

The National Telephone Exchange Company have just signified their approval of a scheme suggested by their local agent, Mr. James Stewart, stock and share broker, for the establishment, not only of a Telephone Exchange in Derry, but for the extension of the system to Strabane, and eventually to all the small towns of which Derry is the business centre. This is a very important matter for the trading interests of Derry, and it is to be hoped the mercantile and manufacturing community will seize the opportunity offered to obtain what has now become a necessity of business in all large and important centres. Belfast is already the centre of a very extensive telephonic system, there being trunk lines to Portadown, Carrickfergus, Larne, and Ballymena, and unless the Derry people are alive to their own interests the Belfast system may speedily be extended on to the towns in this district, with a similar result to that which has followed the running of the local railways under Belfast control. The object of Mr. Stewart's scheme was to bring all the towns in the Derry district, and doing business with Derry—Strabane, Limavady, Letterkenny, Raphoe, Castlederg, &c., and perhaps Omagh—into one group, served by one telephonic system, and to give the subscribers the benefit of this extended system without extra cost beyond the city tariff. The company have, after much negotiation, assented to the proposal so far as Strabane is concerned, and if the undertaking meets with success, no doubt the other towns will also be included. Such a concession is a new departure in the practice of the company, and will confer a very substantial benefit on the city. The conditions are that forty subscribers come forward in Derry and a few in Strabane. We are quite sure, from the enterprise and spirit of the merchants of Strabane, that there will be no difficulty in finding sufficient support in that go-ahead town, and we should hope the Derry merchants will act with similar spirit and enterprise. With so many shipping and railway companies, and public boards and offices, there should be no difficulty in forming the nucleus of the Exchange. It is proposed to establish a call-box in the Newsroom, Castle-street, by which members of the Exchange could communicate with their own business premises and with those of others free, and by which non-members could enjoy the privilege of a three minutes' use of the telephone on payment of 3d. There would be a similar call-box in the Victoria Market, these being the two centres where business men most do congregate. There would then be a trunk line to Strabane, and a call-box would be established in the Strabane markets on the same terms, so that a merchant in Derry or Strabane could communicate with either town from his own office or from the public call-boxes. It would, in fact, bring Derry and Strabane within speaking distance. It is also provided that as soon as six solicitors join the Exchange call-boxes will be established in Lifford and Londonderry Courthouses. There can be no doubt of the value of this scheme from a business point of view, and it is to be hoped it will be speedily carried out.

Description

Three-storey corner building with five bays to Castle Street and two bays to Lower Magazine Street. Red brick façade with adornments and natural slate pitched roof. Cornice mini-pediments and fascia; originally with balustrade and coping above but now removed. Corner pier and finial in situ. Five double-height rendered pilasters resting on mini-pediments and rustication pilasters, which are over-painted, at ground floor level. Five square-headed openings at first and second floor to Castle Street; two square-headed openings at first and second floor to Lower Magazine Street. Rendered window surrounds with cornice detail at head to all openings at first floor. Replacement top-hung casement windows to all upper floor openings. Four square-headed openings to Castle Street at ground floor and two to Lower Magazine Street, all with one-over-one vertical sliding sash painted timber windows and side-hung, painted timber shutters. Prominent broken-pediment door surround to Castle Street, at right-hand side, with central shield motif, paired scrolled brackets and pilasters, all painted. Painted, part glazed three-panel timber door with transom light.

History

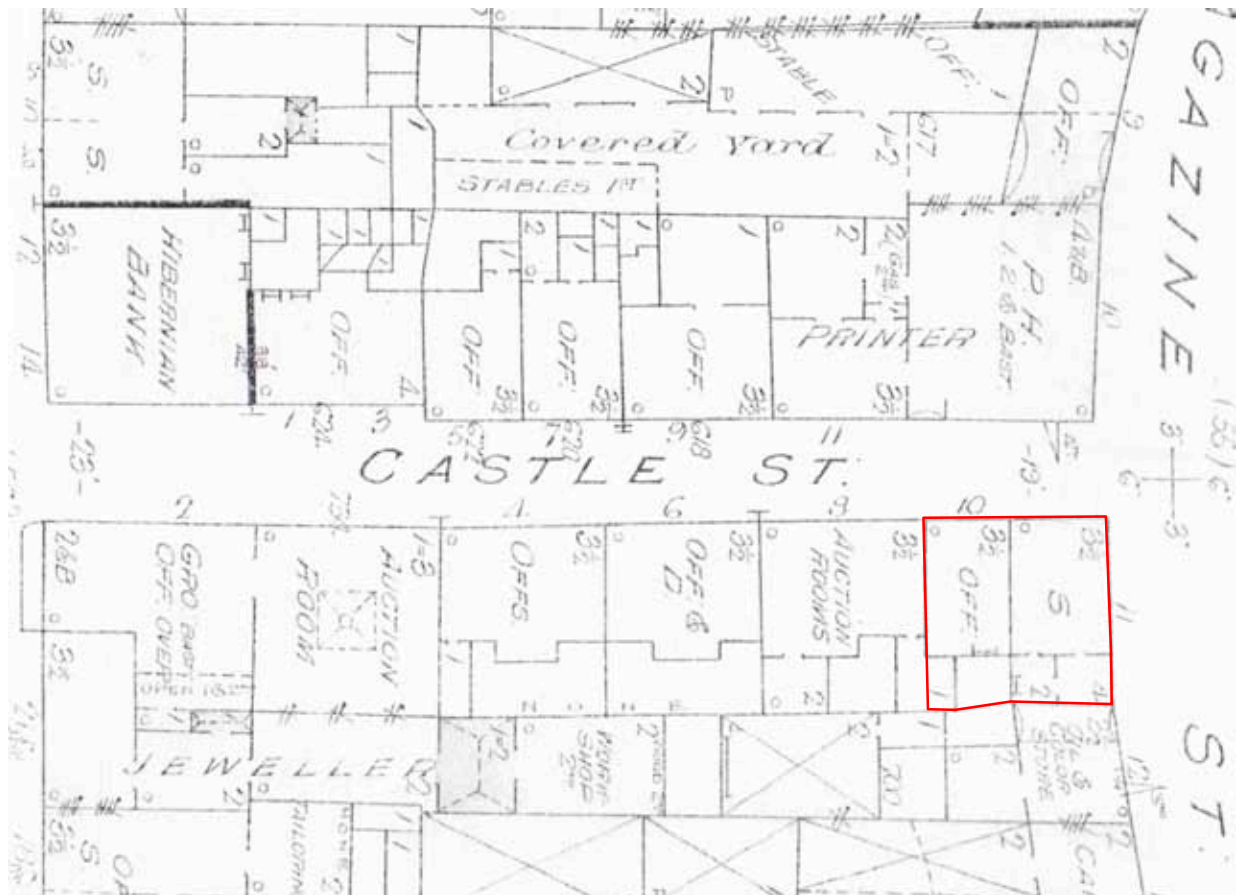

1899 valuation map indicates the site occupied by two, three-and-a-half-storey buildings part in use as offices and part in use as a shop. Site re-developed with the existing three-storey building, the Property Exchange Buildings, built between 1905 and 1909. Building vacant circa 1973. Refer to No.11 Lower Magazine Street, with which this property was constructed (See left in photograph, coloured blue at ground floor).

Description

Two adjoining, three-storey, three-bay, mid-terrace buildings set at the back edge of the pavement. Dressed red brick façades at first and second floor. Traditional ground floor shop fronts (see photo circa 1973) now removed. Natural slate double-pitched roof. At eaves height, three rows of projecting brick, including a dentil course. Each facade with three openings at first and second floors. Each opening is surrounded by brick specials, has shallow-arched heads and has flush-set painted keystones. Painted band courses at heads of first and second floor windows. One over one, shallow-arch headed, vertical sliding painted timber sash windows to each opening at first and second floors. At ground floor, two square-headed shop front openings, with contemporary frames and doors. One square-headed side entrance opening at ground floor, on right-hand side, with painted timber door and transom light.
