Description

Eleven-bay building on first and second floors, six-bay four-storey, five-bay three-storey, set at the back edge of the pavement. Painted smooth rendered rusticated façade at ground floor, facing brick to upper floors and natural slate, stepped, double-pitched roof with five barrel roofed dormers. Square-headed openings on upper floors, diminishing scale, all with moulded window surrounds. Broken pediments and brackets at first floor. Vertical sliding sash painted timber windows to all upper floor openings; nine-over-nine at first floor; six-over-six at second and third floor. Four large segmental arch headed openings at ground floor, each with stylised broken pediment and pilasters. Small pane glazing to all ground floor window openings. Two square-headed door openings, to left and right-hand side of façade; each with stylised pediments. Stained timber panel doors.

History

Site formerly occupied by the Wesleyan Methodist Chapel, built 1763, later used as store but brought back into use as a place of worship in 1816 as the Primitive Wesleyan Methodist Chapel. Site later used as shirt factory; re-developed as Youth Hostel, late-20th century.

'The Primitive Wesleyan Methodist Chapel situated in Magazine Street was built in 1763 and used by Wesley in 1765 on his first visit to the City. Being found however too large for the congregation it was for many years employed as a store but was again converted into a place of worship in 1816 on the occurrence of a schism in the society on which occasion it received its qualification of Primitive. See Wesleyan Methodist Ministers. A part of the building is still let for a store at £10 a year. The chapel is used as a Sunday school in the interval between morning and evening services and for this a rent of £20 a year is paid by the Dean. The Chapel can accommodate 200 persons.'

History

Formerly nos.7 and 8 Lower Magazine Street. 1899 valuation map indicates the right-hand bay provided a narrow carriage arch access to no. 7 at the rear; mainly stabling, coach building and builders yard. Left-hand bay at ground floor provided a narrow carriage arch access to the rear of no. 8.

Circa 1999 new user established as the Nerve Centre.

‘The Nerve Centre is a youth self-help organisation established in 1990 in Derry, Northern Ireland to provide a creative outlet for youth culture and the many young people who feel excluded from the "arts sector". By bringing popular music, film, video, animation and interactive multimedia together, the Nerve Centre aims to promote creative collaboration and fusion between young people working across the field of popular culture to support the youth and education sectors to embrace hands-on learning and training in the new digital technologies.

Since 1999, the Nerve Centre has been based in a purpose-built multimedia arts centre along Derry’s walls with a live performance venue, café, rehearsal space, recording facilities, video editing suites and animation studios. The Nerve Centre is a registered charity managed by a board of directors that includes representatives from the education, arts, business and funding sectors.’

Description

Substantially rebuilt circa 1999, whilst retaining, and altering original façade. Three-storey, three-bay, mid-terrace building set at the back edge of the pavement with painted, smooth rendered façade, and natural slate, double-pitched roof with brick chimney on left-hand gable party wall positioned centrally on the ridge. 3no. segmental arched openings at first floor and 3no. square-headed openings at second floor. New plain narrow window surrounds on first and second floor windows. One-over-one vertical sliding sash painted timber windows. Plain quoins added full height to left side of façade. Segmental arch headed window openings at ground floor level either side of semi-circular headed door opening, all with rendered arched heads and band course. External roller shutters to all ground floor openings. City wall in foreground of photograph.

History

1899 valuation map indicates the building in use as a carp (carpenters workshop?) at ground floor and occupied by the Model Laundry at first and second floors.

The building is now part of the adjoining Nerve Centre, a youth self-help organisation, established, in 1990. The Centre provides:

‘...a creative outlet for youth culture and the many young people who feel excluded from the "arts sector". By bringing popular music, film, video, animation and interactive multimedia together, the Nerve Centre aims to promote creative collaboration and fusion between young people working across the field of popular culture to support the youth and education sectors to embrace hands-on learning and training in the new digital technologies.

Description

Two-storey, three-bay, mid-terrace building set at the back edge of the pavement with painted smooth rendered façade and double-pitched slate roof with two rooflights. Three square-headed window openings at first floor all with vertical sliding sash painted timber windows behind temporary wire mesh grills. Square-headed window opening to left-hand side at ground floor, square-headed carriage arch opening to right-hand side and square-headed door opening centrally positioned. External roller shutters to door and window openings. Painted, vertical boarded timber panelling and doors to carriage arch. To right hand-side, one-bay, mid-terrace (loading bay) building set at the back edge of the pavement with painted vertical boarded timber panelling façade and slate roof raised above that of the adjoining building to the left-hand side. Wide door opening at ground floor; one narrow square-headed window opening at first floor with painted timber casement window; and one segmental arched head opening at second floor with irregularly arranged glazing and painted timber panels. Part of adjacent Nerve Centre.

History

1899 valuation indicates the building was at that time used as offices, with a covered yard and stables to the rear accessed via a carriage arch opening on the left-hand side of the façade. Derelict by 1973, later substantially demolished and rebuilt; eaves level raised by half a storey; third-storey added to right-hand bay; internal floor levels altered to accommodate additional second floor; first floor window positions lowered; original carriage arch opening closed and repositioned to second bay from the right-hand side. Right hand, three-storey bay forms part of the adjoining Nerve Centre.

Description

Three-storey plus basement, five-bay, end of terrace corner building with painted smooth rendered façade and flat roof concealed behind parapet. Five square-headed openings at first floor with part window surround and string course and one-over-one vertical sliding sash painted timber windows to all openings. Five square headed openings at second floor with painted timber casement windows and string course just below sill level. Fascia sign at ground floor level across full width of façade supported on six pilasters. Three square-headed openings at ground level with one-over-one vertical sliding sash painted timber windows and painted timber external shutters. Two door openings; to centre and to right. Four-storey reduced to three-storey after c1930, but before 1973.

History

1899 valuation map indicates the site occupied by a four-storey building plus basement used at that time as a public house at ground, first and basement levels. Fourth floor possibly added to an earlier three-storey building but later removed after 1930. Building in circa 1910, un-rendered facing brick with double-pitched gable roof; and six-over-six vertical sliding sash windows at first and second floors, six-over-three at third floor.

Description

Three-storey building with three bays. Set at the back edge of the pavement. Red brick façade with adornments and natural slate roof. Corner pier and finial in situ. Cornice mini-pediments and fascia; originally with balustrade and coping above but now removed. Double-height rendered pilaster resting on mini-pediment and rustication pilaster, painted at ground floor level. On first and second floors, three square-headed openings, two of which are paired on right-hand side. Openings on first floor have rendered window surrounds and cornice detail at head. Replacement top-hung casement windows to all upper floor openings. At ground floor three square-headed openings, a centrally positioned narrow door and transom, with window to left, and another opening to right which is wider than the other two openings. Later external side-hung painted timber shutters.

History

1899 valuation map indicates the site occupied by two, three-and-a-half-storey buildings part in use as offices and part in use as a shop. Site re-developed with the existing three-storey building, Property Exchange Buildings, built between 1905 and 1909. Building vacant circa 1973. Also refer to 12-14 Castle Street, with which this property was constructed. (See right in photograph, coloured green at ground floor).

Description

Three-storey, four-bay, mid-terrace building set at the back edge of the pavement. Red brick façade and natural slate double-pitched roof. Matching brick chimneys located at left-hand gable and on right-hand side, centrally positioned on ridge. Rendered, double height pilasters from first floor through to eaves, with cornice and frieze. Four openings at first floor and at second floor. First floor has tripartite square-headed windows, with pilasters, cornice and centrally positioned pediment rising to second floor window. Also on first floor, a single square-headed opening with window surround, and pediment detail at head. At second floor, a tripartite square-headed window, and a single square-headed window. All upper floors have one-over-one vertical sliding sash painted timber windows. All of unequal pane sizes, except for right-hand side second floor where the window panes are of equal size. At ground floor, shop front below cornice with central painted timber panel door. External roller shutters to shop windows. To right-hand side, door surround with pilasters; cornice; and pediment rising to first floor window. The margin of this pediment on the right, together with a mini-pediment on the left-hand side of the building, supports the double height pilasters. Door is four-panel painted timber with transom light. Photo to Map reference LM6, 11 Lower Magazine Street, shows white paintwork at above property.

History

1899 valuation map indicates the building at that time was in use for the storage of oil and colour.

Description

Three-storey, five-bay, mid-terrace building set at the back edge of the pavement with red brick façade and natural slate double-pitched roof. Unpainted, rendered pilasters from first floor window sill level to eaves with cornice and frieze. Tripartite square-headed window centrally positioned at first floor with unpainted, rendered pilasters, frieze, cornice and pediment. One square-headed opening with window surround either side of tripartite window. Tripartite square-headed window at second floor and one square-headed opening either side. All upper floor windows one-over-one (unequal pane sizes) vertical sliding sash painted timber windows. Square-headed shopfront below cornice with pedimented pilasters either side (one pediment missing). Pedimented door surround to left-hand side with frieze and pilasters. Six-panel painted timber door with transom light. Square-headed carriage arch opening to right-hand side with key stone, and painted sign 'Craft Village'. Similar to adjoining property at no. 12 Lower Magazine Street, see map reference LM8.

History

1899 valuation map indicates the building occupying the site at that time was in use as a carpenter's. Current building built circa 1992, part of the Craft Village. The Craft Village is a replication of an 18th century street and 19th century square. It incorporates a variety of multipurpose retail outlets with flats above. The Craft Village was opened by President of Ireland, Mary Robinson in 1992.

ELEVATION OF SURVIVANTS HOUSE.

LONDONDERRY.

Proposal drawings, Sandham Symes, Dublin, 1868

THE NEW BANK OF IRELAND, LONDONDERRY.

THE building recently erected in Londonderry for the Bank of Ireland, was opened for business on Monday, 3rd inst. It stands in Shipquay-street on the site of premises formerly occupied by Messrs. M'Connell, wholesale grocers. The façade presents a pleasing elevation. The style of architecture is Italian, freely treated. The first storey has a bold and effective dentil cornice, supported by elaborately-carved trusses and pilasters. Over the cornice there are five finely-executed heads. The windows in this storey have circular heads, bold archivolt mouldings, and sunken and moulded spandrils. On second storey the windows have square heads, and the dressings consist of pilasters, trusses, and segment entablatures. The windows of the third storey have segment heads, with plain architrave dressings. The material used in principal front is Glasgow stone. The windows are filled with plate glass; those of the public office are secured with patent revolving shutters. The ground floor comprises the public and private offices, strong rooms, lavatories, w.c.'s, &c., all suitably fitted and furnished. On the upper floors are apartments for the agent. The kitchen, servants' apartments, and porter's room, are in the rear of the building. A residence for the sub-agent has been provided on the portion of the site facing Magazine-street. The plans were prepared by the architect to the Bank, Sandham Symes, Esq., F.R.I.A.I., Lower Dominick-street, Dublin. The works have been well executed by Messrs. G. and R. Ferguson, Pump-st., Londonderry.

Description

Three-storey, five-bay, mid-terrace double-fronted townhouse set at the back edge of the pavement with Flemish bond, red brick façade on a stone band course. Un-cut stone at basement level with windows bricked up and/or below pavement. Natural slate double pitched roof, with rooflights, no chimneys. Three square-headed openings at ground floor and five square-headed openings at first and second floor, of diminishing scale. All with six-over-six vertical sliding sash, painted timber windows. Ground floor set above street level and accessed by four steps leading to off-centre three-centred brick arched opening. Neo-classical refined door surround, fanlight with segmental arrowheads over stepped cornice, dentil course, frieze and architrave supported by two ionic half-pilaster and two part fluted ionic columns, with narrow panels between, on plinth. The painted timber panelled door is a good example of its type. Also refer to No. 20 Lower Magazine Street, map reference LM13.

History

Townhouse built circa 1840 partially on the site of the castle or tower-house. Tower-house built by Ó Dochartaigh for Ó Domhnaill circa 1530, from which the design of the O'Doherty Tower, Tower Museum is derived. Tower-house later the magazine and store, demolished after 1837.

'The Magazine is situated in a street adjacent to the Wall to which the building has given the name of Magazine Street. It stands on the site of the castle which Sir Henry Docwra on his arrival at Derry 'presentlie resolved to fortify'. See General History and the Plan of 1600. It appears as a store on Raven's plan of 1625 and on those of 1689 and 1788 as a magazine. It was repaired and strengthened about forty years ago by Sir William Smith, assistant royal engineer of the District and remained in charge of the ordnance till a lease was obtained from the Irish Society by Sir George F Hill. Of the ground on which it stands, the government it is understood, having relinquished their claim it now belongs to Mr Robert Young who has occasionally let it to the government. There are no stores deposited in it at present the ammunition of the troops being kept in the barrack.'

Ordnance Survey of the County of Londonderry, Thomas Colby, 1837
'The castle built by Ó Dochartaigh for Ó Domhnaill c1530. A small tower-house like the one at Buncrana is shown in 1602. Used as a store or powder magazine until 19c, it was on the site of nos. 18-19 [Lower] Magazine Street.'

The Streets of Derry (1625-2001), J G Bryson, 2001

1899 valuation map indicates the building being used at that time as a dwelling; later used as a shirt factory store and offices.
